

FOCAL CITY

CASEY AITKEN

What if all residents of the city lived equidistant to the city's center? The opportunity for equality arises from this concept. Equality in this city is defined by the quality of residential area and access to transportation, as well as one's distance from his residence to the city's geographic center. The geographic size of the city condenses a population the size of Chicago while allowing any citizen to live within walking distance of the center.
